Philadelphia Latino LGBT Group Focuses on HIV/AIDS

February 22, 2012

Galaei, a nonprofit in Philadelphia, continues to raise awareness about the issues facing the Latino LGBT population, Ponte al Dia reports. When it was founded in 1989, Galaei was one of the city's first organizations to focus on health-related issues in the Latino LGBT population and to shed light on discrimination and stigma. Today the group works to build bridges in the community and to help the local LGBT population access specialized health care, fight job discrimination, obtain marriage equality and educate the general public.
