“When we recorded ‘867-5309/Jenny,’ none of us imagined that number would still be stuck in people's heads decades later," said Tommy Tutone's lead singer, Tommy Heath. "If that little piece of pop culture can now help someone remember Cancer Support Community's and Gilda's Club's Helpline and connect them to real people, real community and real support, that's incredibly meaningful to us."

The campaign's website, csc8675309.com, reads: "When cancer touches your life, everything can feel overwhelming. In that moment, knowing who to call matters. CSC-867-5309 is now the number you can turn to for support. If you or someone you love is facing cancer, call (272) 867-5309 for support."

"Cancer can create a lot of uncertainties, so it's important people have a memorable number to turn to for support," said Lisa Ireland, executive vice president of external relations at CSC. "The power of this campaign is its simplicity. In the 1980s, Tommy Tutone made '867-5309/Jenny' impossible to forget. Now, we're channeling that same iconic number to help people remember that cancer support is just a call away."
