In an act of retail activism, the highly anticipated Housing Works Fashion for Action fundraiser collected $250,000 to support the HIV nonprofit's mission.

The fashion-forward fundraiser kicked off on November 12 with a VIP opening night reception and sale featuring discounted apparel and accessories from over 80 brands and a dozen curators.

The shopping extravaganza took place at the Housing Works flagship thrift shop in New York City's Chelsea neighborhood. The event was open to the public from November 13 through 15.

Closet Curators included Robyn Mowatt, Alice + Olivia, Derrick Adams, Jason Bolden & Adair Curtis and many more. The event also featured live music from Kristine Barilli, MAKADSI and Mia Moretti. See the whole list of designers and curators here.

“When I got the ask, it was a no-brainer, I said ‘yes’ immediately,” Mowatt, who has worked in the fashion industry for more than a decade, told ABC News.

This year’s Fashion for Action aligned with Hunger and Homelessness Awareness week, an annual program that draws attention to the problems of hunger and homelessness through educational, fundraising and advocacy events.
